To the Right Honourable
Sir RICHARD BOYLE, Knight, Lord Boyle, Baron of Toughall, Viscount Dungarvan, Earl of Corke, and one of his Majesties most Honourable Privy Council of the Kingdom of Ireland, &c.

RART of every desertfull birth (Right Honorable) in any man his Country may challenge, his Sovereign a part, his Parents a part, and his friends another. As I cannot be useful in every respect to each of those, so I will strive to express at least a will, if not a perfection in ability to all: Where a generall voice warrants an approbation, there every service is a duty. The truth of it both concerns and invites me, out of the same and applause of your Nobleness, to make a particular Dedication of some serious hours to your Survey, whom the world speaks both Noble and Learned, wherein as I have done my best to accommodate discourse with the choisest Language, so I desire that my ambition of being known unto your Lordship, may not be imputed either unto an error of impudence, or an impudence in erring. Please you to know thus much of me, that I am partly imboldned hereunto, by the assurance of your love and favours to that Noble Gentleman S^r William Hull; to whom as I am tied in double bonds of bloud and friendship; so, I am so much obliged unto him, that I cannot devise a better rent then to do you service: But chiefly the report of your own honourable merit and just commendations encourage me to this duty, though otherwise unknown, not questioning but you will be pleased to take notice of one, who loves and honours Vertue in all Personages for Vertues sake. Vouchsafe (Right Honourable) this poor testimony of my observancy, intended only to serve you, not to instruct you; and you shall not only largely requite my endeavours, but may also expect a more steady and particular duty from

Your Honours most ready Servant,

HENRY COCKERAM

A PREMONITION FROM THE Authour to the Reader,

Am not ignorant of the Praise---worthy Labours which some Scholars of deserved Memory, have heretofore bestowed on the like Subject that I have here adventured on: Howsoever it might therefore seem a needless task of mine, to intrude upon a Plot of study, the Foundation of whose building hath been formerly level'd and laid, yet the Justice of defence herein is so clear, that my endeavours may be truly termed rather a necessity of doing, then an arrogancy in doing. For without appropriating to my own comfort any interest of glory, the understand- ing Readers will not, the ignorant cannot, and the malicious dare not but acknowledge, that what any before me in this kinde have begun, I have not only fully finished, but throughly perfected. To write an Apology of Justification would argue rather a distrust of my Work, then a confidence of merit. Be pleased therefore (honest and (therein) Learned Reader) to survey a short Premonition, for the order of the ensuing Vocabulary. First, the method is plain and easie, being Alphabetically, by which the capacity of the meanest may soon be enlightened. The first Book hath the choicest words themselves now in use, wherewith our Language is enriched, and become so copious, to which words the common sense is annexed. The second Book contains the Vulgar words, which whensoever any desirous of a more curious explanation by a more refined and elegant speech shall look into, he shall there receive the exact and ample word to express the same: Wherein by the way, let me pray thee thee to observe, that I have also inserted (as occasion serves) even the mock-words which are ridiculously used in our Language, that those who desire a generality of knowledge may not be ignorant of the sense even of the justian terms used by too many, who study rather to be heard speak, then to understand themselves. The last Book is a recitall of severall Persons, Gods and Goddeses, Giants and Devils, Monsters and Serpents, Birds and Beasts, Rivers, Fishes, Herbs, Stones, Trees and the like, to the intent that the diligent Learner may not pretend the defect of any help, which may inform his discourse of Practice. I might insist upon the generall use of this Work, especially for Ladies and Gentlewomen, Clerks, Merchants, young Scholars, Strangers; Travellers, and all such as desire to know the plenty of the English: but I am confident, that experience will be the truest Herald to publish to the world on my behalf, how as my debt to my Countrey is to be challenged, lenged, so my Country shall not altogether boast of any immunity from being indebted to my Studies; only by the way, I would intreat thee, gentle Reader, that thou wouldst have care to search every word according to the true Orthography thereof; as for Physiognomy, in the letter P, not in F, for Cynicall, in Cy, not in Ci; and where thou meetest with a word marked thus *, know you that it is now out of use, and only used of some ancient Writers. Thus what I have done is (Reader) for thy benefit; accept it, and make use of it, so shall I find reward in my Labours, and rest thy Friend.

The End of the Second Book.

THE THIRD PART, TREATING OF GODS AND GODDESSES Men and Women, Boys and Maids, Giants and Devils, Birds and Beasts, Monsters and Serpents, Wels and Rivers, Herbs, Stones, Trees, Dogges, Fishes, and the like.

Of Beasts.

Armadillo, Beast in India, like unto a young Pig, covered over with small shels, like unto Armor, it lives like a Mole in ground.

Baboon, A Beast like an Ape, but far bigger.

Beaver, A very hot Beast of nature, living much in the water, his stones are much used in Physick and of great esteem, but not so much esteemed as his skin.

Bore of Panonia, the cruellest of all Bores.

Buffe, A very fierce Beast much like unto a Bull, having a very long main.

Camelion, the least of all Beasts which breed Eggs or spawne, it changeth it self into any colour that it sits on, except white and red, therefore unconstant men are sometimes called Chamelions; it is said it only lives by the air.

Crocodile, A Beast hatched of an Egg, yet some of them grow to a great bigness, ten, twenty, or thirty foot in length, it hath cruell teeth and a scaly back, with very sharp claws on his feet; If he see a man afraid of him, he will eagerly pursue him, but on the contrary, if he be assaulted he will shun him. Having eaten the body of a man it will weep over the head, but in fine eat head also; thence came the proverb, She shed Crocodile tears, viz. feigned tears.

Ermine, A small Beast less then a Squirrill, the Fur thereof is most costly, only worn by Princes.

Eveck

Of Beasts.

Eveck, A wilde kinde of beast much like a Goat.

Giraffe, A wild Beast living in the Desarts, if it see man it flies forthwith, but being taken, it is easily tamed; his legs and feet are like unto a Deer, with a neck as long as a warlike Pike, with two horns in his head, and long hair on his neck.

Hippopotamus, A fierce beast living in the River Nile.

Hiena, A subtle Beast like a Wolf, having a main and iron on his body, counterfeiting the voice of a man; at the night it will call shepherds out of their houses, and kill them; he is sometimes Male and sometime female.

Ignarus, A small Beast without a tail, having small legges, with three long sharp claws in each of feet, wherewith he climbeth up Trees, and his fire is to sit there, on the tops thereof; it was never seen to feed on any thing, and therefore is supposed to live by the air; In the night it singeth six kind of Notes one after another, as La, Sol, Fa, Mi, Re, Ur: It is not above eighteen inches in length, and is near as thick as long; his head resembles an Ape, but he hath very little eyes and mouth, and hath long bristled hair. It is the slowest of all beasts, for fifty paces is a whole daies journey for him.

Libard, A spotted wild Beast, the Male of a Panther.

Lyon of Cleonia and Molarchia are the two most cruellest and fiercest of all other Lyons.

Lizard, A little Beast much like the Evert, but without poison, breeding in Italy and other Countries; the dung of this Beast is good to take away the spots in the eye, and cleareth the sight, and the head thereof being bruised and laid to, draweth out thorns, or any thing sticking in the flesh.

Lynx, A spotted Beast much like a Wolf, it hath a most perfect sight, insomuch as it is said, that it can see through a wall.

Panther,

Of Beasts.

Panther, A cruell Beast smelling sweet, with a fair spotted skin, wherewith she allureth other Beasts to look on her, but lest her head should affright them, she hideth it, and by this means she getteth her prey more easily.

Rhinocere, A Beast as big as an Elephant, but thicker and higher; they are utter enemies, and alwaies combat when they meet, he hath a horn in his nose bending upward, which he whetteth against the rocks for his defence.

Salamander, A small venomous beast with four feet, and a short tail, it lives in the fire, and at the length extrem cold puts out the fire.

Shamoyse, A wild Goat keeping the mountain.

Shrew, A kind of wild Mouse, which if it go over a Beasts back, will make it lame in the chine; and if it bite, the Beast swelleth to the heart and dieth.

Sue, A most cruell fierce Beast, carrying her young upon her back to shadow them from the heat with her huge tail.

Tyger, A truculent Beast and the swiftest of all other Beasts; wherefore they are taken very young in the dams absence, and carried away by them on horse-back who hearing the cry of the old Tyger following after them, do of purpose let fall one of the whelps, that while she beareth that back they in the mean time may escape safe with the other to the Ship; but of all the Hind can-Tyger is the most cruell.

Of Birds.

Alcyon, A Bird called the Kings-fisher, and maketh her nest in the Sea when it is a sign of fair weather.

Anthos, A Bird which counterfeith the neighing of a horse.

Barnacle, A kind of Sea Gull; it grows not by Vegetation, but as Dubertius writes.
